Friendship.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's weeping eyes,
Share them, and by kindly sharing
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should anyone be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out bravely and truly
Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching, as you go—
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver.
He will make each seed to grow;
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

A ROMANCE OF THE SEA.

It had gone two bells in the middle watch, and I could hardly keep my eyes open. The morning was exceedingly warm, but there was a light breeze from the westward—just enough to keep the canvas full. I had thought of everything I could remember to fight off the drowsiness which was stealing over me. I recalled the last song I had heard ashore and the girl who sang it. I thought of the letters I had to write before we made Hakodate, for we were cruising in the Japan sea on this night of June, 1886. There was no excuse to trim sail to keep one's self awake.

The breeze, though light, was steady, and the foot of the main course, to which I had extended my walk, and now stood under for the delightful draught it cast, was as motionless as if the sailrope had been of metal. I suddenly felt that I was thirsty, and wandered down to the gunroom for a goblet of rum and limejuice to give relish to my next pipe.

"Hello, old man! Why have you turned out? Three bells have not struck yet."

The face that looked up to mine from the mess table was that of a beauty—so refined, not masculine comeliness, but positive beauty—that no debutante at a London drawing-room, no matter how lovely, could demur to an exchange. There was nothing effeminate about the figure. The shoulders were square and muscular, and the neck showed unmistakable signs of strength. Arthur Bescoby, though we called him Miss Bescoby in the mess, was no girl boy, but a young man from the pleasant county of Kent, who was a good cricket and football player, pulled a strong oar and gave ample promise of being a valuable addition to her majesty's navy.

"I can't sleep, Paddy (Paddy was my pet name), I don't know what it is that worries me so, but I feel wretched."

"You're in love, Bessy. That visit you made to Scotland has settled you."

Bescoby's pale face flushed. "No, I don't think I'm very hard hit, Paddy," he rejoined, "only something to keep my mind busy between mails. By the way, what did you make her out to be yesterday?"

I gave him the ship's position at noon, and chaffed him at having forgotten it.

"Suppose you take a turn on the deck with me, Bess," I said, "and you can get a jolly good hosing at eight bells, which will do you more good than scribbling in this messroom. Come along and I'll tell you about the girl that saved my life in Limerick."

Before I concluded that remarkable tale Bescoby's blues had disappeared, and when the next watch was mustered he was all right again. He was a favorite of mine, and though he spoke to me freely on many things there was still an air of reserve about him that made all perfect confidence impossible. He was sensitive to a degree, and suffering under the chaffing which a lot of larky midshipmen find indispensable to fill in their leisure hours.

"I'd like to speak to you, sir, for a minute," said a huge fellow, the tallest man in the ship, a marine whom we called Gog Thompson, and who looked after Bescoby's clothes and washing, as well as mine.

"What is it, Gog? Quick; reel it off. I'm sleepy."

"Ay, ay, sir. It's about Mr. Bescoby. Did he ever talk to you about St. Elmo's light?"

"Why, yes; he was curious to see it. Well, what of it?"

"He's more than curious, sir. He's superstitious about it. He thinks it will have an effect upon his life."

"Nonsense," said I. "Mr. Bescoby has been chaffing you, Gog."

"No, sir," replied the big marine, earnestly, who loved the handsome young middy as if he had been his son. "I know you are his chum, sir, and that if I told you you'd talk him out of those ideas. But please, sir, don't mention that I had anything to say about it."

"Certainly not, Gog," and, as the marine saluted and walked forward I remembered that Arthur was superstitious and had asked me many things about ghosts and fairies and other uncanny things indigenous to the Isle of Saints. But he had never mentioned St. Elmo's light, that peculiar ball of electric light which is occasionally seen in the low latitudes clinging to the trucks and the ends of the yards.

"I'll pump him about it to-day," I thought, and fell asleep.

That afternoon when I was writing up my individual log Bescoby came into the gunroom. I saw the same curious and worried expression on his face, I had observed the night before.

"Bessy, what the deuce is the matter with you? Are you fretting because you have not seen St. Elmo's light?"

"Who has been telling you that yarn, Paddy?" he asked quickly, with a flush of annoyance. "I know. That big donkey, Gog, has been loading you up with a lot of bosh."

"Look here, old man," I said, "you confide in me. Now, I have talked to you about banshees and ghosts, tell me about this light business."

He sat down beside me, and putting his arm on my shoulder said in a shamefaced sort of way:

"My dear Paddy, I'll tell you all. I am a silly duffer, you know, and one week's shooting at Eaglesham Manor settled me. I met there a country-woman of yours. I will not describe Nora to you. But here is her picture."

"Humph!" I thought; "badly hit, indeed," as he took a locket which he wore from a silk cord around his neck, opened it and laid it before me. It was the face of an exceedingly beautiful girl—a roguish, laughing face, with clusters of brown curly hair and deep blue eyes. It was well painted. The artist was evidently deeply interested in his subject.

"That is Nora," he said, and the gentle lowering of the voice as he pronounced the name of the loved one told the whole story.

"I congratulate you upon your good taste, Bess. Am I to be best man?"

"Don't chaff me, Paddy," he said, "Nora is as poor as I am, but she loves me. She will wait for me. I am sure she will. Now some one has been telling her all about St. Elmo's light, and I promised her that when I saw it I would go aloft and examine it closely and make scientific observations and all that sort of thing.

"And the last words that Nora spoke to me (we were on the shores of Eaglesham lake and she had kissed me, and called me her own sailor and told me that she knew she never could love anyone half as well as a sailor) were: 'Arte, don't forget St. Elmo's light. And Arte, when you see that light Nora will be near you in spirit. And when you see it you say: "Nora, Nora, Nora," three times, and wherever I am my soul will be close by you at that moment, Arte.'

"Oh, Paddy, she is as beautiful as an angel and I am sick with longing to see her again," and the poor lovesick lad buried his face in his hands.

"By Jove, you've got it bad, Bessy," I said. "I thought I was fond of the girl that saved my life in Limerick, but my affection is as a tallow dip alongside St. Elmo's light itself compared to yours."

"Don't chaff any more, will you, Paddy?" and the hapless lover looked pleadingly at me.

"I will not, Bessy. I don't wonder that Nora fell in love with you; you are too good looking for a man. And I promise you that if on my watch on deck I see St. Elmo's light I'll send Gog Thompson to pull you out by the heels."

After this conversation I noticed a change for the better in Bescoby. He had lost his moodiness and gave such hot shots to his tormentors, who used to chaff him for their digestion, that he silenced their batteries in short order. I think he felt relieved that he had told me his story, and I listened to the entire tale of his meeting with and engagement to the Irish beauty.

I hoped that she had not been flirting with my chum, but even as he told the story of their love I was villain enough to conclude in my own mind that Nora was looking out for a rich husband, and was getting her hand in by practicing on Bescoby. There was such a strawberry and cream flavor about the business, a Paul and Virginia atmosphere, that I felt my countrywoman was simply amusing herself with the susceptible young sailor, and nothing more.

Two days afterward we brought up in Hakodate. There were a few merchantmen in the harbor and an English yacht. At mess that evening one of our fellows who had been ashore gave us all the gossip of the place.

"That yacht is the Spray," he said, "and belongs to a rich Scotch lord who has a large party on board. The consul told me all about them. His aunt and married sister are chaperoning the girls. One is awful pretty, an Irish girl. She is engaged to his lordship, and they are to be married at the British embassy at Hong Kong. I say, we must give them a dance. Just think how jolly. Here we are, away from home, and the lots of English girls we know. Hey for the maids of merry, merry England. Wouldn't it be grand if we got to Hong Kong in time for the wedding?"

"What's the owner's name?" I asked.

"Lord Gilmour. A jolly young chap. Has a grand shooting and great place somewhere near Glasgow."

"I want to see you a minute, Paddy."

I looked around and Bescoby was at my elbow. He was strangely pale, and his eyes wore a wild and unnatural expression.

"Paddy," he said, as he stood at one of the starboard ports, "there is something awfully wrong. I know this Lord Gilmour. It was at his house I staid. It was there I met Nora. And he was attentive to her, I remember, but she did not seem to care about him. And now she is on this yachting cruise with him. And he is engaged to some one on board. Oh! Paddy, I know there is something wrong!"

"Nonsense, belay all that stuff," I said cheerily. "If Nora is on board, which is not probable, there are other Irish girls in the world, and it does not follow that the Scotchman is engaged to her."

He shook his head, and as he walked away I felt just as surely as if I had heard the story that his Nora was the lord's fiancee, and that she had used him to bring her laggard to the proposing point.

Bescoby lost no time in confirming his suspicions. I met him on the bund ashore a few hours afterward, and he told me that he had seen one of the yachtsmen, and got the whole story from him.

The false Nora was soon to become Lady Gilmour, and she had thrown her midshipman lover completely overboard.

"I met her, Paddy," the poor fellow said, "and she smiled at me and shook hands, but it was as if I was a pleasant acquaintance and nothing more. Lord Gilmour was quite friendly and spoke of the shooting and invited me on board. I had only one chance to speak to her, and I whispered: 'Nora, have you forgotten?' And she laughed and said with an air of a woman of the world: 'You silly boy; I want you to forget all that nonsense.' But it is all over now. I will never see her again. Never, never!"

"Bosh," said I, slapping him on the back; "you'll get over all this. Why, that girl that saved my life in Limerick, and who swore I was the only man she ever loved, was married a week afterward to a wealthy tanner, and had the impudence to send me her wedding cards."

But all this well-meant consolation had no effect upon my friend, and I was glad when we got underway and pointed for the Straits of Sunda. Bescoby went about his duty in a dull, mechanical sort of way, and even the fellows who used to persecute him most had respect for his despondency, although they knew not the cause. He never mentioned the name of his false sweetheart again, and I avoided all reference to the subject.

I was in the second hour of a delicious sleep a few nights afterward when somebody grasped me violently by the arm and shook me.

"Rouse up, sir; rouse up!" cried Gog Thompson, hurriedly. "I think there is something wrong with Mr. Bescoby. He is aloft on the mizzen royal, and I sent one of the boys after him, and the boy came back and said he was talking to himself and muttering something about St. Elmo's light, and I am afraid, sir, that he is out of his mind."

While I was hurriedly putting on my trousers the marine told me that that singular phenomenon had been seen first on the main truck, and that another ball of fire had rested for a moment on the end of the mizzen royal yardarm. The minute Mr. Bescoby saw this he had rushed aloft and laid out on the yard. Filled with apprehension I came on deck and started quickly up the weather rigging. There was a heavy swell on and the ship was rolling considerably. I stopped at the mizzen topmast crosstrees and sung out softly:

"Hello, Bescoby! Lay down here for a moment. I've got something to tell you."

He did not reply, but kept talking to himself, so I began the ascent of the topgallant rigging. As the ship rolled heavily to leeward I saw his figure outlined against the dusky sky, and I heard him say in a peculiarly dull but distinct monotone:

"I have found the light at last, Nora. I have kept my part of the promise. Is your spirit near me now?"

Again the big ship rolled to leeward and the end of the royal yard was lifted up to the clear patch of sky. But there was no one there. Poor Bascoby had either sprung or fallen overboard. I shouted to the quartermaster to put the wheel hard down, and as the ship came shaking up in the wind I jumped to the topgallant backstay and slid rapidly to the deck. The boat was at once lowered away and then another, but though we searched for more than an hour and burned lights over a vast area of water, we found no trace of the hapless midshipman. There was gloom in the gunroom mess for many weeks afterward, for Bess was a general favorite.

I never told the story of his unfortunate attachment, and I never saw the woman whose marriage I read of in a Hong Kong paper, who had made my poor friend the sport of a summer vacation, and ruined a young and promising life for her own gratification, and for the winning of wealth and title.—San Francisco Call.

OURSELVES AND NEIGHBORS.

HAPPENINGS IN FRANKLIN AND ADJOINING COUNTIES.

Gleaned From Our Exchanges—The News of the Cumberland Valley and Southern Pennsylvania, With a Few From Beyond Mason & Dixon's.

Dr. R. A. McKinley, pastor of the Presbyterian congregation at Clearfield, announced from the pulpit that he had asked the presbytery to dissolve the pastoral relations existing between himself and the congregation at that place.

Henry Leninger, of Union township, Clearfield county, who is 84 years of age, had his barn and all of his crops destroyed by fire recently. He had hid in the barn $700 in gold, which he had concealed there for safe keeping, and this was secured by a neighbor at the peril of his life.

Lock Haven Express: All cats are said to be possessed of nine lives, but as a general thing have but two eyes. Mr. M. Flaig, of South Fairview street, this city, is the proud owner of a two-months-old kitten that has three eyes. The extra optic is located under the chin and is apparently as good an eye for seeing purposes as either of the other two, which are in their proper places. The kitten is as playful as any of the others of the litter, and is certainly a great curiosity.

The State Department has compiled the amended fish and game laws of the State in accordance with a joint resolution adopted by the last Legislature. The laws will be published in pamphlet form and will be ready for distribution within ten days. Six thousand copies are for the Senate, 3,000 for the House of Representatives and 500 each for the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Fish Commission.

Five years ago Mrs. John Pippert of Middletown, Pa., lost her wedding ring by throwing it with some dishwater into the garden. The other day Mrs. Pippert dug some potatoes in her garden, and while peeling them for supper the knife struck something hard in one, and to her astonishment on cutting into the potato she found her lost wedding ring. As evidence of this strange tale the ring, the potato, the garden spot and Mr. and Mrs. John Pippert are truthful witnesses.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

We witnessed the operations of a McCormick corn harvester on the farm of Mr. Luther Walter, it being the first one introduced into Washington township. The machine does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly a great labor-saving device. It is drawn by two horses, with the driver perched on his seat, and cuts down one row of corn a time, at such distance from the ground as is desired. It arranges the stalks in an upright position, and binds them into bundles of any size preferred, after which it pitches them out of the way of the reaper. The twine encircles the sheaves below the ears, so that the corn can be husked out without loosening the bands. Mr. Walter's man has been cutting on an average about eight acres of corn a day, but the full capacity of the machine on favorable ground is from ten to twelve acres a day.—Waynesboro Zephyr.

Rev. Edmund Walton, Wednesday of last week, obtained from the clerk of the courts, in Hagerstown, says the "Globe," a certified copy of the names of the persons who signed the applications for saloonkeepers licenses last spring. He says the names will be published, in a few days, in "The Christian Worker," of which he is editor. Copies of the paper containing the names will be sold, the proceeds going to defray the expenses of the clerk of the court for transcribing, and the expense incident to the publishing of the names. Rev. Walton returned to Hagerstown Monday from Frederick county where he had been holding some big out-door meetings. He expects to erect a big tent on some vacant lot here and conduct revivals until cool weather comes, when he expects to lease the old Christ's Reformed church. A 10-day's convention of the Christian Workers will inaugurate his winter's work in Hagerstown.

Oscar Schwinger, Hagerstown, was drowned while bathing in Lake Michigan, Wednesday of last week. His mother, Mrs. Charles Schwinger, has been spending the summer in Michigan with her sister and Oscar was on a visit to his mother. Charles and Irwin Schwinger, brothers of the drowned man, left Thursday to bring the body East. Young Schwinger was about twenty-three years of age.

David Hughes, after an unexplained absence of thirty years, on Tuesday night rejoined his family of wife, daughter and son in Indiana, Pa. Hughes was wounded during the war, came home and married Miss M. P. Reed, of Kittanning. In 1864 he returned to the army, and in 1865 was honorably discharged. Instead of returning home Hughes buried himself in the pineries of Wisconsin. Hughes has accumulated considerable wealth, and says he is now too happy with his family to discuss the particulars of his long absence and continued silence.

A peculiar tale comes from Cammal village, up in the Pine Creek country, Lycoming county. Monroe Merringer found a 3-year-old child sitting at a spring playing with a big rattlesnake. The reptile allowed itself to be pushed about with a chip in the hands of the baby. Merringer killed the snake, which was five feet long.

The crop of potatoes in York county this season is immense and the choicest potatoes are selling for 35 cents a a bushel.

At the recent session of the Sovereign Grand lodge of Odd Fellows held at Atlantic City, it was decided by a vote of 167 to 32 that no saloon keeper, bar tender or professional gambler shall be eligible to membership in the order. Another move about to be adopted is to abolish the regalias and substitute a badge to conform in color with existing regulations.

There was a demand on the subtreasury in New York the other day for $5000, which took as much labor to satisfy it as a withdrawal of $1,000,000 in gold for shipment by one of the large banking firms. A big double truck, drawn by powerful horses, pulled up at the rear of the sub-treasury in the afternoon, being sent by R. H. Macy & Co. to get $5000 in pennies. The sub-treasury officials could hardly believe their eyes when they saw the order. The lightning calculators among them calculated that the firm wanted just 62 miles worth, or enough to reach from Fourteenth street to the Harlem river, if the pennies were placed side by side in a stright line. Several strong men proceeded to cart thirty-five pound bags, each containing five thousand cents, out to the truck until one hundred of the bags were piled on, making about a ton and a-half together.

Harry Garman, a horse jockey, Greencastle, was thrown from Muldoon, a race horse, at the Newport, Perry county fair, and his wrist was sprained. He has returned to his home in Greencastle.

Following is the unique advertisement of a milliner in Dubois: "I leave this town shortly for Denver, and since March 3d have asked to have all little accounts settled. So now I will mail your bill itemized to your ministers and priests so that each one may know how many subjects he has if he wants to discourse on the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal."

Dogs at Middleburg killed 4 sheep for Frank Hykes and bit 12; tore 4 for John Bowders, and 4 for Ross Gordon, and scattered Frank Binkley's flock.

Mrs. John A. Irwin, McConnellsburg, has a pumpkin vine in her garden that has twenty-seven well developed pumpkins on it.

It is said that an old gentleman named Flynn, who died at Patton the other day, had reached the remarkable age of 104 years.

Rev. I. Peightel, of York, has been elected to fill the vacancy in the board of trustees of Mercersburg College, caused by the death of Rev. C. U. Heilman.

The corner stone of St. Luke's Lutheran church was laid at Scotland Sunday afternoon, Sept. 22nd. A large congregation assembled and a fine choir, with organ and violin accompaniment, rendered excellent music. Rev. C. L. Ritter presided over the services, which were held in the Covenanter church, and conducted the opening exercises. Rev. E. H. Leisenring preached the corner stone sermon from Romans 9:33, a fine and able discourse. The assembly then went to the site of the new church and the corner stone was laid by the pastor, Rev. Ritter, according to the ritual of the Lutheran church, and after the benediction by Rev. Leisenring the services ended.

Monday morning of last week the threshing machine of J. H. West, of Middlesex township, blew up on the farm of Samuel Beetem, three miles north of Carlisle, and completely wrecked the machine. The barn floor was torn up and heavy timbers cracked. Several men were slightly injured.

William Sites, aged 14 years, was drowned in the Yellow Breeches creek at Lisburn, Cumberland county, Monday of last week. The boy was in a boat gathering shell barks and it is supposed was seized with an epileptic fit to which he was subject. The body was found in water only 18 inches deep.

The conditions that prevail in many sections of the state, according to a poll made by the Philadelphia Press, are not at all favorable to the preparation of the ground for fall seeding. The drouth has extended into many counties and caused wells to go dry that were never known to fail before, and streams to run very low. Pasture fields in some places present a parched appearance, owing in part to the hard frost of the 15th inst. For the same reason the corn and buckwheat in some of our northern counties has been cut short by being prematurely ripened. The customary equinoctial rains could not come too soon for many sections of the state.

Burgess H. M. Bushey, than whom there are few better posted on important events of the late war, has in his possession a minnie ball which was taken from the forehead of J. Gilmore Rowe, on the day following the battle of Chancellorsville on May 3, 1863. Mr. Rowe, now deceased, a son of the late Major Rowe and brother of Hon. D. W. Rowe, took part in this engagement and was wounded in the forehead directly between the eyes. The wound was dressed by one of the army surgeons and pronounced very slight. Next day, however, Dr. H. G. Chritzman, of Welsh Run, who was in the vicinity, learing of the misfortune of his friend and acquaintance, hastened to his bedside and made an examination of the wound, finding the ball still imbedded there. The ball was extricated and the patient recovered. The bullet was brought home by Mr. Rowe and sometime after his death fell into the possession of his nephew, Watson R. Davison, Esq. He has had a silver band bearing the date of the battle and his uncle's name placed about it, and by him it was shown to the Burgess. Mr. Bushey handed the ball to Dr. Chritzman last week and he at once recognized it, giving a vivid description of how he discovered it thirty-two years ago in time to save Mr. Rowe's life.—Greencastle "Echo-Pilot."

Frick company, Waynesboro, received advices from their agent, Isaac Miller, to the effect that the big Ingleton gang or revolving plow, recently built by the company and tested there, has taken first premium at the Wisconsin state fair.

Master Samuel Snively, son of Squire Snively, Greencastle, was sent to the stable of L. H. Fletcher for a mowing scythe, and while searching for the same his nose came violently in contact with an iron post breaking that member.

Jacob Diehl, son of John Diehl, living near Kisecker's Mill, met with a serious accident on Monday of last week. He was driving a mower when the horses became unmanageable and he fell from the machine, coming in contact with the guards, which penetrated his head, making an ugly gash.

The Auburn Wagon Company, Greencastle, has within the past few weeks declined some quite large orders for wagons, on account of their inability to increase their present output. The contracts now in hand will take the entire product of the works for several months to come.

According to a special report from Pottsville, Pa the five companies of First Defenders—Logan Guards, of Lewistown; National Light Infantry and Washington Artillerists, of Pottsville; Ringgold Artilery, of Reading, and Allen Rifles of Allentown—will, on April 8, 1896 go over again their old march from Harrisburg to Washington, D. C., through Baltimore. The only time that they made this trip was in 1861, thirty-five years ago, when they made the harrowing march so fraught with dangers and difficulties, in response to President Lincoln's call for troops to defend the imperiled National Capital. This action was the result of a suggestion made by H. A. Eisnenbrise, of Reading, president of the First Defender's National association.

Governor Hastings is preparing for a personal tour for the inspection of the charitable, penal and reformatory institutions of the state, to which he will devote several months. He will also summon the Harrisburg board of public charities and other state boards to examine into the condition of their affairs. The governor last week began the investigation concerning state printing and binding.

The first cast iron sausage grinder in this county was invented and manufactured by Theodore Koons, of Greencastle, 42 years ago. It was then as now a curiosity. The cylinder was round and arranged with rows of spikes; the knives were made of the blades of old mowing scythes, and fitted into a circular arranged form of wood and then placed in an iron box. These machines did good work and the inventor found ready sale for them at good prices, and for many years were manufactured and sold by the inventor's father, Abram Koons. Many of these grinders are still intact and are in use today. The model for the grinder is still in the possession of Mr. Koons, who is now as he was at that early day a resident of Greencastle.

Thomas. J. Edge, Secretary of the State Department of Agricultural, is now arranging details for the farmers' institutes. Three of these meetings have already been held in Lancaster county, the one at Black Barren Springs being largely attended. Over 1,100 carriages were counted and it was estimated that at least 6,000 people were present. One will be held in Greencastle.

In a prairie schooner, George Heintzman and his wife and six children rode all the way from Nebraska to Shamokin. They left the West because the crops on their farm were not sufficient to furnish them with a living, and traveled in the schooner on account of not having money to pay car fare. The journey by the way Heintzman came is 2000 miles. It took three months and six days to cover the distance.

While Miss Ida Zerling, of Landisburg, Perry county, was petting the family horse, the animal snapped at her, catching and biting clear off the lower portion of her right ear, containing a gold ear ring.

While assisting her mother to make pear butter in the yard of her home, in Amberson's Valley, Miss Sue, daughter of J. Harry Jones, was badly burned by her dress catching on fire from flames under the kettle In an instant, almost, her entire dress was in a blaze. Her mother attemted to extinguish the flames and in doing so had her hands badly burned. Her father, who was in the house, hearing the screams of to the women, ran out and tore the dress from the girl, also burning his hands severely. Miss Jones was considerably burned about the body, but is doing well and no bad results are anticipated.

The members of the Grand Army posts and other soldiers of the southern part of Huntingdon county, with their wives, sons, daughters and friends, held a picnic Thursday at the Ashman campground, near Three Springs. Milton Scott Lytle, of Huntingdon, president of the Juniata Valley Veteran Association, and other speakers delivered addresses.

There is a case of illegal deer shooting reported from Adams county. A resident of one of the mountains killed a doe with young a few days ago. The deer was afterward brought to the settlement by a man who claimed to have found it dead.

The Dunkers of Back Creek district will hold a lovefeast at the meeting house, near Upton, Thursday and Friday, October 25 and 26. Hucksters will not be allowed to sell within one-half mile of the meeting.

Philip P. and George W. Bliss, of Rome, Bradford county, sons of the late P. P. Bliss, the Gospel hymn writer, who was killed in the Ashtabula wreck, have received an estate of $100,000, part of which came from the contribution of pennies in Sunday schools, at the request of D. L. Moody.

Wednesday afternoon of last week, Rev. A. R. Lambert went to Juniata township, Huntingdon county, and united Jesse Morningstar and Mary A. Bowser in marriage. About an hour after the ceremony while the bride was sitting on the groom's lap, George B. Spoonybarger, Morningstar's brother-in-law, handed him a gun and the weapon was accidentally discharged. The shot took off the whole upper part of the groom's head and his brains were scattered all over his bride and the room in which they were sitting. Death was instantaneous.

WOMEN IN THE CHURCH.

Women were the last at the crucifiction and the first at the resurrection of Christ. In every great epoch or emergency, says the Harrisburg Star-Independent, they have proved the helpmeets of man,, and in many cases shown a courage and sagacity which materially aided in the struggles achieved. The writer recalls an instance of a man who had acquired much of this world's goods. He remarked that his wife had always carried the keys of his safe, and she was the truest, safest counsellor and adviser; that during his long and active career he was always successful in any venture in which he asked for the opinion of his helpmeet, and in every case where he did not consult or acted contrary to her advice had lost money. He spoke in the most tender and reverential terms of his wife, who by several years preceded him to the grave. She was not close or miserly, but her purse was ever open to the claims of the needy. She, however, knew her husband's weakness for not being able to "lay some thing by for a rainy day," and her good judgment and strong womanly sense saved him the pennies which grew into dollars and hundreds of thousands of them. So much for woman in a worldly sense.

The congregations composing the Western conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church are now electing delegates to the Geneneral Conference, which will assemble at Cleveland, Ohio, in May, 1896. The question of the admission of women as lay deligates is also being voted upon. The Michigan conference, which met at Ann Arbor week before last, voted in favor of admitting women by an almost unanimous vote, aud it is expected that the Rock River conference, at Elgin, Illinois, will take similar action. Most of the Eastern conferences are either opposed to or more evenly divided on the question than their Western brethren.

The earnestness and influence of women in all church work, and in the advancement of the cause of religion in every way is a recognized fact. Without their influence, example and effort, churches of every denomination would lauguish, and none know this better than the active male workers in the various churches themselves. It is strange, therefore—not to say unaccountable—that there should be such strenuous opposition to the admission of women to participation in church councils, an opposition which is by no means confined to the Methodist church.

ENCOURAGING TO WHEAT GROWERS.

It is not surprising that farmers are selling but little wheat at the present low price of 60 cents per bushel, after it had been as high as 83 cents. But there is encouragement in the following from the Philadelphia Times: "The price of wheat has fallen from 83 to 60 cents a bushel, but this is no argument that the low valuation of last year will succeed the rise of six months ago or that wheat growers will suffer by holding back their harvests. In the nature of things a reaction was inevitable and the reaction came, but the short crops in Argentine and lack of Russian supplies in European markets means a demand before long upon American reserves which must restore the figures to quite near the dollar mark. This year's crop in the Northwest is below the average and there is a good market in sight for every bushel the farmers may have to sell."

A GREAT FEAST.

From figures given by the daily newspapers we learn what a tremendous affair the barbecue at the late national encampment of the G. A. R. at Louisville was. The number fed was 75,000. This required 45 beeves, 250 sheep, 25,000 loaves of bread. The beeves were cooked in trenches 100 feet long. The burgout required 8,000 gallons, which was composed of 150 bushels of tomatoes; 150 bushels of potatoes, 25 bushels of onions and 75 pairs of chickens. Over 25,000 tin cups were used and 400 waiters employed to wait on the 50,000 who were at the table at one time.

IT IS good news to learn that gambling is to be prohibited at the Hagerstown fair this year. For some years past the presence and operations of swindlers of various kinds disgraced the fair and materially injured it. If this nefarious business had been continued this year the attendance of the better class of people would have been greatly decreased. Hagerstown is a good town and can get up a good fair and the managers don't need to admit gamblers to help boost it.

The fair opens on the 15th inst.

BY ITS dissentions the Democratic party in New York is inviting defeat again this year. It is the old fight of Tammany against the State Democracy headed by Charles S. Fairchild. It is probable that in this muddle it will be shown, as is often the case, that opposing political factions hate each other more than they dislike the opposition party, and that these quarrels arise from love of spoils more than form love of principle.

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

FANNETTSBURG.

Wednesday morning last, September 25, the writer, his wife and daughter, went up our beautiful valley by way of Merry Brook Farm to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bock, to attend a reception given to Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Runk, a newly married couple from Clearfield county, the bride being the sister of Mrs. Bock and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Donathan, former residents of Fannettsburg but now living at West Decatur, Clearfield county. After an hour pleasantly spent in social chat dinner was announced. It was excellent in quality, bounteous in quantity and the large company that sat down at the table did it ample justice. Those who enjoyed the feast were: Mr. Runk and his bride, David Bock and wife, R. M. Miller, wife and daughter, Mrs. Geo. McGowan, Mrs. W. A. Stinger, Miss Emma Everett, Miss Mary Miller, Grandma Mrs. Mary Jones and the host and hostess.

After a ramble about the farm and in the woods for late flowers and nuts, the well-pleased guests departed for their homes. The writer and his family stopped on their way at the hospitable home of W. A. Stinger who put up their horse and would not let them leave until they had done justice to an excellent supper, which Mrs. Stinger knows so well how to prepare and serve. Then William's jokes and geniality always give a zest and flavor which add greatly to the enjoyment of what his bountiful board furnishes.

Hon. T. M. Mahon and the editor of the REVIEW were the guests of Landlord Haiston over Friday night. The Fannettsburg Cornet band serenaded them after which they each made a brief speech, acknowledging the kindness shown them. They were on their way to attend the Odd Fellows' picnic at Fort Littleton Saturday, for which delightful occasion the Fannettsburg band had the honor of furnishing the music. Harry McCurdy, our obliging mail carrier, conveyed the band to the Fort and home again in his commodious stage coach.

The weather is still dry and the water in many of the wells is so very low that most of the people must economize in its use.

Lineman T. A. Morrow and his force of workmen have finished their work of putting up new telegraph poles for the Western Union company between Shippensburg and the top of Sideling Hill where the "Three Mountain Road" joins the pike. They put in the last new pole and stretched the wires on Saturday. The job is well done as an inspection of the line will prove.

CONCORD.

Rev. J. W. Curry, Williamsport, Pa., is visiting friends in town. He delivered a very able sermon in the M. E. church Sunday morning.—James T. Alter and George Rennells, Port Royal, spent Sunday in town.—George Donnelly is attending Dry Run academy.—James Johns, who has been working in Chambersburg for some time, returned home Friday.—Miss Jennie Donnelly, Alpena, Michigan, is visiting relatives in this place. Miss Donnelly was a former teacher in our village, but for the past 15 years has been teaching in Michigan.—Dr. V. I McKim, of Logan, is visiting his parents in town.

Wm. J. Harris is making some improvements at his tannery near town.—The county commissioners were in town last week and gave H. N. Boggs the contract to put a new foundation under the covered bridge near the Concord narrows.

Cider is plenty but the crop of winter apples will be small owing to the drouth.

State Superintendent Schaeffer has set October 18, as arbor day and our young men should remember the date and plant shade trees on the new school ground.

The celebration at Blair's Mills Saturday was a success in every respect. The railroad hauled over 1300 people and more than half that number drove to the grove. The music was furnished by the Port Royal and Concord bands.

STENGER.

William Lindsay, Chambersburg, has been visiting at George W. Geyer's for several days.—Miss Laura Beltz is home from Philadelphia for a few weeks.

Last week one evening, a number of young men and boys went to serenade a couple that had just been married; after the boys had been there about a half hour they were invited to leave, which they did. Too much of the Calithumpian business is bad taste to say the least.

GREENWOOD.

The patrons of Mount Union school erected a pole over sixty feet in height in front of the school house, the teacher furnished a flag with 45 stars and it may now be seen daily floating in the breeze, giving evidence of the patriotism of the people. The school, small some years ago, now has nearly fifty pupils who attend during the winter. Thirty-six have already been enrolled and are attending very punctually, and this term bids fair to be successful.

Bicycle riding on the Sabbath seems to be entirely too common as every Sabbath numbers of young men (and lately one female) are seen spinning past both ways, seeming to have set aside the day as a day of rest and made it one of recreation. If this is the case all over the land, is there not danger that after awhile the Sabbath will become anything but a holy-day and thus bring God's vengeance on the land? But how to remedy the evil is the difficulty.

The ruddy face and robust form of James F. McFerren was seen in our neighborhood lately. He was looking after his political interests.

Figures On Education.

Dr. William T. Harris, United States commissioner of education, on Monday made public his fifth annual report for the school year ended November 30, 1893. It comprises three parts, the first of which is devoted to statistics. These show that in the year 1892-93 the whole number of pupils enrolled in schools and colleges, public and private in the United States was 15,083,630, or 22.5 per cent. of the entire population.

This was an increase over the preceding year of 370,697, and the total would be increased to 15,400,000 if pupils in attendance upon special educational agencies were included. The enrollment of pupils in the public schools for the year numbered 13,510,710, an increase over the preceding year of 1.92 per cent. while the average attendance increased 3.45 per cent. The details of attendance show that children in the United States leave school for about two-fifths of the year to engage in labor or from other motives.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Those Who Have Passed to the Great Beyond—The Death Record In Franklin County and Elsewhere.

Mrs. Henry Kelso who was so terribly injured on Sept. 4th at her home near Roxbury by falling from a hay mow and being impaled on a fork died on Monday evening. She had been improving up until Saturday a week ago when she grew worse. She was 28 years old and leaves a husband and two children. The funeral took place this (Thursday) morning. Interment at Shippensburg. Mrs. Kelso was the daughter of Frederick Koontz, Roxbury, and was a most estimable woman. She was a member of the Lutheran church.

Annie Alda Everett, the infant daughter of John F. Everett, died at the home of her father near Fannettsburg on Thursday, September 26, 1895, aged six months and a few days. The funeral took place on Friday; interment in the Reformed graveyard. Not many days ago the mother died of consumption, as was told by the REVIEW. Mr. Everett and his two surviving sons have the sympathy of the entire community in their double bereavement.

Jacob Martin, Jr., died at Mercersburg on the 25th, ult., in his 73d year. He was born and raised near Welsh Run, resided for some years in Illinois but spent his later years in this county. He is survived by four sons and two daughters: Henry, George and John of near Mercersburg; Valentine, of Nebraska; Lena and Sarah at home. The funeral took place Friday. Interment in the Dunkard graveyard at Welsh Run.

Rev. N. G. White, who was pastor of the Presbyterian congregation in McConnellsburg for many years, before the war, died at his home in New Haven, Fayette county, Pa., Monday, aged 86 years. He was an able preacher and a hard working, attentive pastor, and as such was well known in the Cumberland Valley, in Fulton and Bedford counties and in other sections of the state. Rev. White was married to a sister of William Henry McDowell, Esq., of Chambersburg. She has been dead some years. He had been making his home with his daughter, Mrs. Wolff, in New Haven. He leaves a son also, Dr. T. H. White, of Connellsville, Pa.

Samuel I. Taylor died at his home on South Main street at 4 o'clock this morning, of consumption, aged 41 years, 11 months and 13 days. He was formerly from Edenville, and for several years worked at the straw mill at the head of Falling Spring. He is survived by a wife and several children. Funeral Saturday at 1 o'clock. Interment at Edenville.

What a Veteran Thinks of It.

How long, O Lord, how long, is the lament in the REVIEW of August 1, in regard to the unsettled claims of the people in Franklin and other counties against the United States government for property destroyed in 1863-4 to continue? The mills of the gods grind slowly, large bodies move slowly and great governments pay slowly. The same wail is applicable in the case of the soldier. How long, how long will it be before that long-winded government will give the long-suffering old veteran his 160 acres of land? This, it was understood, he was to get if he got nothing else. The public lands have been granted with a lavish hand to railroad and other corporations, and the men who made it possible for the government to distribute those lands are left to wait while the mass of the greedy land grabbers are being stuffed to repletion. Why is this thus? Echo answers, Why?

Every soldier since the foundation of this great and glorious government up to 1861 received this land bounty, but there it stopped. One of the many excuses is that the great number of claims would embarrass the land office—and that syndicates would be formed to buy up the soldiers' warrants as fast as they were issued, and the soldier would be but little benefited. This may be all true but it is a very lame excuse for the non-payment of a just obligation. It is strange that we hear no complaints against syndicates holding large bodies of government land as in the cases of the Central and Union Pacific railroad companies and other like large corporations.

It is a very simple matter for the government to arrange it so that the soldier could get the benefit of his land. A land warrant at the present time is worth $193. The government and the soldier should deal direct with each other and let outsiders stay out. Let the government keep the land and dispose of it at its leisure, which it can easily do, and give the soldier the value in money or in bonds. By this means the land-grabber would not be in it at all and the government and the soldier would both be benefited.

Why not issue bonds for this purpose as well as others? It is a legitimate debt and one that the government is in honor bound to pay sooner or later. No one supposes for a moment that at this late day many soldiers would settle on the land. He is getting ancient, you know, and the crops of aches and pains, the result of long campaigns, are about all he is able to attend to at this time. A fair money value for his land is what he wants and it would be the proper thing for a grateful country to do, if it is grateful.

The writer knows that all soldiers in the regular army who were under fire in any Indian campaigns previous to 1861, got their land bounty. Hon. Henry Wilson, vice president of the United States, was the great soldier champion in his day, and since his death no one has risen in the senate to fill his place. To the credit of the soldiers of the regular army be it said, they raised the sum of $12,000 and erected a monument to the memory of that great and good man, a son of Massachusetts, the state that has done more for its soldiers than any other state in the union. The pothouse politician of New York and his political organs that denounce the country's defender as a coffee cooler and fraud, is only trying to draw public attention away from its own filthy nest of vice and double dealing.

Hooker's divis on was not cooling coffee in '63 when it went there to drive out the foul den of copperheads and other rebel sympathizers who were hanging innocent black men to lampposts. These howling organs cry out robber to the brave soldier. Well they know who is the robber. Look at home, ye scrapers of slums, ye Shylocks. It was such a gathering that Christ scourged out of the temple. Again I say, how long, O Lord, how long must men who went at their country's call, submit to the insults and scoffs of these vile traducers! One billion and a-half of dollars is the amount of money the government poured into the lap of the money changer in Wall street all in gold—more than has been or will ever be paid out in pensions or bonds to the soldiers. Upper Strasburg.

A MEMORABLE HOSTELRY.

An Old Hotel Stand Sold At a Very Low Price.

One of the oldest and most prominent hotel stands between Chambersburg and Pittsburg, in the old days of four-horse stages and Conestoga wagons, was recently sold at a very low price. The stand is known by the present and the past generations as the McIlvaine stand; it is on the eastern slope of Rays Hill in Fulton county. For many years the property was owned and the hotel was kept by John McIlvaine, one of the kindliest men that ever entertained a guest. The welcome was always hearty and the fare always good.

The rooms of the large airy building are now nearly as they were in the first half of the present century, when Daniel Webster, James Buchanan, "Tom" Corwin, Henry Clay and others, whose names will be household words for years to come were passengers over the old stage route by way of the Baltimore and Pittsburg pike from Pittsburg to Washington. This was also the principal thoroughfare from the already then celebrated Bedford Springs to the eastern cities including the Capital of the country.

The writer well remembers the last day that he saw the venerable form of John McIlvaine on the long southern veranda of his hotel. It was the day that the wires flashed across the state, the news of the death of Hon. J. McDowell Sharpe, who had few peers in this commonwealth as a lawyer, nor was there a more incorruptible statesman. Mr. McIlvaine came out to greet the travellers with a kindliness which was a part of his nature, and his shining face framed in a snow-white beard, was like the warmth of a tropical sun on the chilly atmosphere which blew about the summit of Sideling Hill and Rays Hill. Time did not permit the travellers to Bedford the pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of the old hostelrie, but the picture of its proprietor remains engraved upon the memory of at least one of them, and when it is brought to the front of the gallery in which hang the pictures of the friends, the times and the places, we like to remember it is cherished as one of the most cheering of all, where a kindly heart shone out through a kindly face and kindly eyes.

When the yet well and sadly remembered abortion, the South Penn railroad, was under process of construction, and when the drills were perforating and dynamite was shivering the rocks in the tunnels in Sideling Hill and Rays Hill, the old hotel took on a new lease of activity. Its bedrooms were filled with sound sleepers; steaming beverages, fat roasts and well-cooked and well-seasoned vegetables loaded the tables in its large dining rooms. In the hunting season game also was to be found and enjoyed. The juicy wild turkey, the savory deer and the pheasant than which nothing better tickles the palate of the epicure, were to be found here in unstinted quantity. Then Mr. McIlvaine could have sold the property at a high figure. But the railroad enterprise was stopped and the era of activity passed by.

The genial landlord passed over to the great majority after having lived more than four score years, and on Monday of last week the property, including many acres of farming and mountain land, was purchased by two gentlemen named Howard, in Everett, for $2,200, less than one-fourth of what it could have been sold for ten years ago. It is said the new proprietors will improve the property and make it a popular summer resort. It is to be hoped they will.

Two Fulton County Weddings.

Wednesday evening of last week, September 25, 1895, George B. Mock and Miss Grace Snider were married at the home of the bride's parents, near McConnellsburg. The ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, Rev. Jacob Snider, Waynesboro. The groom is the son of Daniel Mock, Sen., and is a sturdy, industrious, young gentleman. The bride is the second daughter of George Snider, Esq., who served Fulton county acceptably as Commissioner and Treasurer. She is an estimable young lady, and will undoubtedly do her share toward making their home a happy one. The young couple have the REVIEW'S kindest wishes for a long life of usefulness and happiness.

A brilliant social event was the marriage on Wednesday noon, September 25, 1895, of Dr. John R. Hunter and Miss Mary C. Wishart, at the home of the bride's parents, in Wells Valley, Fulton county. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. P. Mathers, D. D., pastor of the Presbyterian congregation at Bellwood, Pa., in the presence of a large number of invited guests. The groom is the oldest son of the late Hon. R. I. Hunter, M. D., who was a native of Upper Strasburg and a brother of the late William A. Hunter, M. D. He is now in active and successful practice in Wells Valley. The bride is the only daughter of Captain and Mrs. Harvey Wishart, Wells Tannery. She is an estimable young lady and will adorn the home of her husband. The happy couple left the same evening on their bridal tour.

It is said that Dr. Hunter will probably locate in Lewistown for the practice of his profession. The REVIEW hopes that the newly married couple may have the full share of happiness that falls to the lot of the most favored mortals.

Real Estate Sales.

The Cell farm near St. Thomas was sold Saturday to John F. Cell for $40 per acre. The farm consists of 157 acres. Six acres of mountain land were purchased by the same for $8.25 per acre. Mr. Cell will move to the farm in the spring.

George A. Stork, administrator of Elizabeth Houser, Saturday sold a house and lot on South Main street, Chambersburg, to George Stork, sr., for $405.

William Weaver purchased the George Weaver property, 2 acres of mountain land in Hamilton township, for $65.

Auctioneer Heefner on Saturday sold the farm of the William Smith estate, 87 acres, in Quincy township, to D. W. Thompson, for $30.80 per acre.

Auctioneer Harkins sold for L. A. Culp, executor of L. J. Heefner, the farm of 106 acres, near Edenville, subject to dower, to W. A. Hockenberry for $14.50 per acre and a house and lot in Fayetteville to J. A. Strite, Esq., for $615.

The Missing Boy Returns.

Willie Sellers, son of Mrs. Helen Sellers, Chambersburg, the lad who disappeared so suddenly several weeks ago while visiting in Beverly, N. J., has returned to his home here. He ran away to escape going to school, wandered up through northeastern Pennsylvania and landed at Ithica, N. Y., where he was found by a detective and shipped home. He worked at several places in New York, had a pretty good time and does not seem at all sorry that he caused his mother and friends so much trouble.

TALMAGE GOES TO WASHINGTON.

Accepts the Pastorate of President Cleveland's Church—To Be Installed This Month—His Past Career.

Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage has accepted the call to the First Presbyterian church in Washington, D. C., and will preach his first sermon on Sabbath evening, October 27th.

This delay of over a month in the formal inauguration of Dr. Talmage's services in Washington is made necessary by the fact that certain preliminaries must be observed before he can become a member of the Presbytery of Washington City. Of course he could occupy the pulpit of the First Church in an informal way before that event is consummated, but this would not be deemed regular or proper under the circumstances. He is now a member of the New York Presbytery, and must be formally transferred to Washington. By an odd coincidence the two presbyteries meet on the 7th of October, and an effort will be made to have all the red tape of the proceedings unwound on that occasion. If by some accident the papers could not properly be laid before the Washington Presbytery in time it is possible that a special meeting will be called for this purpose.

After the formal transfer of Dr. Talmage from one Presbytery to the other has been effected, and his name has been enrolled in Washington, it will be necessary to install him as co-pastor of the First Church. This ceremony is an important one, and is usually the occasion of considerable effort on the part of the church. With so prominent a man as Dr. Dalmage the subject of installation, ceremony is apt to be unusually interesting. In a note to Dr. Sunderland he has expressed the preference that the installation should take place Wednesday or Thursday evening, October 23 or 24.

Dr. Talmage's son is pastor of a church at Pittsburg, Pa., and he has invited his father to preach there on Sunday next. That will probably be his last sermon before he becomes co-pastor of the First Church of Washington. He expects to dispose of his house in Brooklyn by lease or sale and to take up a permanent residence in Washington.

Rev. Dr. Thomas De Witt Talmage is a native of New Jersey. He was born at Bound Brook in January, 1832, and was educated at the University of the City of New York. He did not graduate from that institution, but determined to enter the ministry and completed a course at the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, graduating from there in 1856. He was at once ordained pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church in Bellville, N. J. He later went to Syracuse, and from 1862 until 1869 he preached in Philadelphia at the church on Seventh street, above Brown. During the civil war he was chaplain of a Pennsylvania regiment. In 1869 he was made pastor of the Central Presbyterian church in Brooklyn, N. Y., which was the church which was recently burned for the third time. The first Tabernacle, which was the name given to Dr. Talmage's later church edifices, was built in 1870, and had a seating capacity of 3,400. It was enlarged the next year to seat 500 more, but was destroyed by fire December 22, 1872. Work was begun at once on a new Tabernacle, which was dedicated February 22, 1874, with seats for 5000 persons. It was then the largest Protestant church in America.

Dr. Talmage is a voluminous writer upon a great variety of subjects, and has published enough books to fill a small library. He is also a constant contributor to several periodicals, and is editor as well of the "Christian Herald." He made a trip around the world a few years ago that became famous and brought him into contact with many of the monarchs of the Old World. He formed on that tour an intimate acquaintance with the late Czar of Russia, and acquired an intimate knowledge of the inward workings of that somewhat mysterious empire.

Dr. Talmage's family is essentially ministerial in its characteristics. He is one of four brothers, all of them missionaries or ministers. The eldest is John Van Nest Talmage, a missionary of the Reformed church in China. Rev. Dr. James R. Talmage is a prominent preacher in a Congregational church, and Rev. Goyn Talmage occupies the pulpit in a Reformed Dutch church. Thomas De Witt Talmage, in 1862 was given the degree of A. M., and the University of Tennessee in 1884 conferred upon him the degree of D. D. Though 63 years of age, he is to-day in the prime of health and vigor, and is filled with energy and enthusiasm for his work.

More South Penn Rumors.

In commenting on the article in regard to the purchase of the old South Penn by the Pennsylvania Railroad and the building of a branch connecting with the Ligonier Valley road, from Ligonier to Somerset, the Somerset "Democrat," says:

We have it from very good authority—it is more than a mere rumor—that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, which now has possession of the right of way of the old South Penn, will within a very short time commence and complete the latter road almost on the original lines on which it was surveyed. The reasons given for this are that for some time the Pennsylvania has had to refuse about thirty-three per cent. of the freight offered, for lack of means of transportation. The Pennsylvania cannot afford to allow a competing line through this region; it requires more track room, and with the magnificent grade from Harrisburg to the West, and a line shortened more than thirty miles, it is almost compelled to complete the South Penn.

Col. Ives, Chief Engineer of the Cumberland Valley Railroad, is in charge of a number of men who are engaged in cleaning out and repairing the tunnels along the South Penn, at Rays Hill and Sideling Hill. Of course no information of note can be obtained from them as to the object of the work at present, but we have been informed by a high official of the Cumberland Valley Railroad Company, that they intend soon to complete the link from Franklin county to Mt. Dallas. We hope this is so.—Fulton "Democrat."

A Peculiar Burning Accident.

Adam Sierer, brother of Henry Sierer, Esq., was seriously burned at the factory of H. Sierer & Co., on Friday morning. Mr. Sierer went into the dry house to attend to some of his duties. A short time later he was found lying unconscious close against the stove which was nearly red hot. His right shoulder and upper arm were badly burned, the flesh being charred. He was rescued from his perilous position and taken to his home where he is still lying and is suffering severely. His condition for a time was thought to be critical. He is subject to vertigo and fell against the stove in one of these spells.

PASTEUR IS DEAD.

The Great Scientist Died in Paris on Saturday.

Professor Louis Pasteur the eminent bacteriologist died in Paris on Saturday evening at 5 o'clock, after suffering eight days from paralysis. He grew worse rapidly and remained in a comatose condition during his last hours. His death was absolutely without pain. His wife devotedly watched at his bedside. His son, his daughter, and his son-in-law, M. Vallery Chantemesse, were present when he passed away.

He was born in 1823 and entered the University in the College of Besancon at the age of 18. In 1852 he was made a member of the Academy of Sciences in mineralogy. The Royal Society of London gave him two medals, one in 1856 and the other, the Copley medal, in 1874. To assign a money value to the inquiry that has of late years occupied his attention would be simply impossible; for the subject was hydrophobia, and how to prevent this dread disease running its fearful course. He commenced by careful experiments on animals in 1880, and he showed that rabies was the result of a specific poison, not a mere form of tetanus, still less a creature of the imagination.

It was his theory that animals inoculated with hydrophobia virus would not go mad, and he demonstrated this by this method: He inoculated dogs with a very weak virus from a rabbit; that is, a virus having a long period of incubation, and at the same time he inoculated a rabbit. When this rabbit went mad and died, the dogs were again inoculated from it, as well as a third rabbit. The process was repeated with the dogs and a fourth rabbit, and so on, till the virus had greatly increased in activity. The first weak inoculation protected them from the second, the second from the third, and so on, till they could stand the strongest virus. The Government commission reported that of nineteen dogs not treated by Pasteur, seventeen took rabies, while of twenty-three dogs which he had treated by his inoculations, not one took the disease.

The critical point was the application of his principle or theory to human beings. The first to be treated was a child—Joseph Meister—who had been bitten in fourteen places by a mad dog. Pasteur, on the 6th of July, 1885, began inoculating the child with a weak virus that would not produce rabies in a rabbit; he increased the strength of the virus daily, and on the 16th inoculated with virus so strong as to produce rabies in a large dog in eight days. The child, according to all reports, is in perfect health. Some modifications in details have been made, but the process remains, on the whole, as described. Between July 6, 1885, and June 11, 1886, Pasteur treated 1,335 patients; of these, 740 cases were of persons bitten by dogs well ascertained to be mad. The usual estimate of deaths by hydrophobia is that 16 per cent. of those bitten by mad dogs die; according to this, 118 of Pasteur's patients ought to have died. There died only four.

His success in Paris was soon followed by the establishment of branch institutes in London and New York. Hundreds of patients have been successfully treated in these places. Dr. Gibier, one of Pasteur's pupils, has been in charge of the American branch since its establishment.

It is clearly established that Pasteur has removed much of the dread of bites inflicted by rabid dogs, when the patient can be brought under the treatment which he introduced. Pasteur has proved himself a scientific benefactor of the human race in one direction. It is hoped that the science of curing will be still further developed until those malignant diseases that have heretofore been considered incurable will be conquered.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1895.

A WORD IN PASSING.

Town and County Briefs With a Bit of Comment—Happenings of the Week and a Forecast of Coming Events.

Jacob Hoover has sold to his son, M. F. Hoover, the Willow Grove flour mill near Waynesboro. The mill is about 100 years old.

The Waynesboro Zephyr issued its last number on Saturday last. Editor Martin says that his daily will soon appear again.

The officials of the Agricultural Society of Cumberland county have figured that the receipts of the fair this year were about $4500.

Chief of Police Elseroad, Shippensburg, was hung in effigy and branded as "clubber." The News says the chief is a most efficient officer.

All persons who do not pay their state and county taxes by Saturday next, October 5, will be deprived of the privilege of voting. No tax, no vote.

The directors have decided to prohibit gambling at the Hagerstown fair this year and have instructed Privilege Clerk George H. Hegar accordingly.

The Commissioners have appointed Jacob Snively collector of State and County tax for Washington township and C. M. Kunkle for St. Thomas.

A Chambersburger has leased the building at Mont Alto formerly known as the Mont Alto House and will have a hotel and summer resort there next year.

Samuel Stenger of near Fort Loudon, was thrown from his buggy on Saturday and seriously injured. The doctors have hope of his recovery. Mr. Stenger is about 60 years of age.

While workmen were engaged clearing off the right of way for the Standard Oil Co. in the mountains east of Mont Aito, over one hundred copperhead and rattlesnakes were killed.

The equinoctial storm failed some how to put in an appearance this season. If it had come and not been too stormy and had brought with it copious rains it would not have been unwelcome.

The Waynesboro papers are sounding the warning as to a water famine. There is not nearly enough now to supply the ordinary wants of the town. It would be in a bad way in case of fire.

John P. Swope, the expert trapper of Barre, Huntingdon county, went out one day last week and caught two wild cats, six foxes and ten minks, a pretty good day's haul, the value in scalps amounting to $12.50.

Rev. Edmund Walton has gone to Philadelphia, where he expects to have the issue of The Christian Worker, containing the names of the liquor license signers, published. Rev. Walton paid $4 for a copy of the signers.—Hagerstown Globe.

Major Wells, State Dairy and Food Commissioner, has discovered a creamery in Bradford county where oleomargarine is bought and repacked and then sold as pure butter. He is securing evidence against the manager of the concern to prosecute him.

William Bender will sell at the National Hotel stables on Saturday next a lot of fine fresh cows and springers. A credit of 60 days will be given. The cattle are first class and persons in want of this kind of stock should be sure to attend the sale.

A peach grower from Mount Pleasant yesterday went into the First National Bank and deposited $1100 in peach checks. Cashier J. D. Newcomer thinks the peach crop of Washington county this year will equal in value the wheat crop.—Hagerstown Globe.

Bids were opened at the Navy Department Tuesday for the construction of six composite gunboats, authorized by the last Naval Appropriation bill. The act limited the cost of the vessels to $230,000, and provided that not more than two of them should be built by any one firm.

Dr. Wm. F. Teeter, 209 South Main street, Chambersburg, Pa. Painless extraction, fine fillings, crown and bridge work, artistic artificial teeth. All work guaranteed. Won't be underbid in prices. 20 years' experience with all the latest and best approved methods in dentistry.

Four men, each leading a large bear, spent part of yesterday afternoon about the W. M. R. R. station on Market street. Two of the animals performed some of the usual tricks of bears until the caravan was directed to "move on" which it did over the railroad bridge and out Water street. The animals were unusually large.

Clerk of the Courts D. L. Grove, of this county, issued 25 marriage licenses during September and Clerk Oswald of Hagerstown issued 43 in the same month. As there is not a great deal of difference in the population of the two counties our neighbors across the line must be more matrimonially inclined than the young people on this side.

Mr. Samuel P. Shull and three sons of Juniata Crossings, spent Monday evening last in this place and furnished some excellent music at the Union Hotel which was highly appreciated by our citizens. The Shull orchestra is gaining quite a reputation as a first class organization. They went up to Bedford in the evening to play at the County Fair.—Everett Republican.

The Chambersburg postoffice will be moved into the new building next week. Our town will then have the nicest office in the Cumberland Valley as regards the conveniences and suitableness of the building, the equipment of new boxes etc. A new carrier, Charles Sonnick, has been added to the force. There are now five carriers; the outside route on which the deliveries were made in a buggy has been changed and all deliveries and collections will now be made on foot. The large safe was moved from the old to the new office Wednesday.

There will be a triangular contest in the Huntingdon-Mifflin judicial district. John T. Bailey of Huntingdon is the Democratic nominee. The Huntingdon Republicans named Hon. W. McKnight Williamson who is now occupying the bench by appointment of Governor Hastings. The Republicans of Mifflin named Horace J. Culbertson. The Republican conferrees held many meetings and took thousands of ballots but failed to agree. Neither candidate would give way to the other. Tuesday was the last day upon which a nomination could be made. The conferrees and candidates met at Harrisburg. It had been decided to submit the dispute to Judge Biddle of Carlisle as arbitrator but he refused to decide between the claimants. Both Republican candidates will run and Mr. Bailey will probably be elected.

Fred Rife will have a car load of Virginia cattle, mostly "feeders," at the West Point Hotel on Monday.

The annual State Sunday School Convention will be held in Williamsport, Pa., October 8-10. A number of delegates will attend from our town and county.

The legislature of Texas yestercay knocked out the proposed Corbett-Fitzsimmons prize fight by passing an anti-prize fight bill through both houses, which will be signed by Governor Culberson.

Now that a teacher of their own race has been employed in one of the colored schools it is to be hoped that there will be no further trouble with those schools, as there has been recently. There have been charges against the teachers, which were heard by the school board, and dismissed as they should have been. There have been assaults, threats and arrests for disorderly conduct and indeed much trouble that should not have been. The new teacher is an exemplary young woman and should have the respect of her pupils for she fully merits it, and the contentions should now cease.

The Governor has appointed the following members of the college and university council to incorporate institutions of learning, with power to confer the degrees: George W. Atherton, State College; Chas. C. Harrison, University of Pennsylvania; W. J. Holland, Western University of Pa.; George E. Reed, Dickinson; J. D. Moffit, Washington and Jefferson college; T. L. Sipe, Muhlenburg college; Edward Brooks, superintendent of schools, Philadelphia; George W. Phillips, West Chester Normal school; J. W. Coughlin, superintendent schools, Wilkes-Barre.

Saturday evening last, as John Ickes, a member of the school board of Southampton township, was starting from the Sunny Hill school house, above Shippensburg, where the board had met, he met with an accident which might have cost him his life. He was driving a colt and two men came along in buggies racing on the pike, which frightened Mr. Ickes' colt, causing it to run away. The wagon upset with him underneath. In this position he was dragged along the pike for a considerable distance. Mr. Ickes was found to be much bruised and complained of being very sore.

Accident To a St. Thomas Man.

As Sellers Coble, St. Thomas, was driving across the Western Maryland R. R tracks on Market street Wednesday afternoon, the left front foot of his horse caught fast between the planks and the rail. The animal was turned round and thrown down and Mr. Coble was dragged over the dashboard. Willing hands soon loosened the harness and freed the horse. The animal was slightly cut and the dashboard of the buggy broken. It was a surprise to all who saw the accident that the horse did not break his leg.

A Preacher Found Dead in a Field.

Friday last about noon, Rev. Isaac Leas, of Carroll township, Perry county, was found dead in the field where he had gone to sow some rye. From the amount of work he had done it is supposed he died several hours before he was found. When he went to work he seemed in his usual health. Mr. Leas was a man highly respected by all who knew him, and his sudden death was a severe shock to his many friends. He was aged 74 years. His funeral took place on Sunday.

New Churches.

The new U. B. church—Liberal—in Horse Valley, near Stephen Keefer's, will be dedicated on Sunday the 20th inst. The services will begin on the preceding Saturday. A number of ministers of that denomination will be present. The structure is of frame. it is handsome and commodious and will meet the wants of the congregation.

The M. E. church in Upper Strasburg is nearing completion. The belfry has been already raised but is not quite completed. The time has not yet been fixed for dedication.

A Change In School Teachers.

At a meeting of the Chambersburg school board Thursday evening, Miss Laura Bittinger was transferred from the West Primary, German street, to the Male Intermediate, King, to fill the place temporarily vacated by Miss May Hockenberry, who is at Harvard Annex. Miss Martha Christian, colored, was elected to fill the school vacated by Miss Bittinger. The new teacher is a graduate of our high schools.

The board decided to bring prosecutions against Major Williams who is charged with disorderly conduct in the school taught by James M. Hoover and against Annie Norman who is charged with similar misconduct in Miss Bittinger's school. Both parties are colored. Annie Norman was given a hearing before Justice Seiders Monday evening.

A Half a Million Dollars in Peaches.

Already this season 75,000 baskets and 85,000 crates of peaches have been marketed at Midvale by seventy-five growers. Eight carloads went from that station in one day. A double-header freight train of twenty-eight cars went north over the B. & C. V. R. R. The Armour company ships from fifteen to twenty carloads a day from this section and consumes about forty tons of ice daily. The Hagerstown company has supplied 150 tons for this purpose. The freight to the eastern markets by the refrigerator cars amounts to eleven cents more per package than by the ordinary car. The Waynesboro Canning Factory is processing peaches rapidly, about 100 hands being employed. Commission men think that the season has reached its height and is on the decline. Estimates have been made that this year's crop will be worth at last a half million dollars to the growers of Washington county alone, this representing the money that has been brought into the county and put in circulation. Already the benefits have begun to manifest themselves in business circles.—Hagerstown "Globe."

Crushed To Death By a Field Roller.

Jonathan Fortney, aged 18 years, son of Jonathan Fortney, residing near Mohler's Church, in Upper Allen township, Cumberland county, was on Saturday found lying under a large field roller, dead. Several boys driving cows to water noticed two horses attached to the roller standing in a field a short distance from the bars. Not seeing any one about they concluded to investigate and were dumfounded to see young Fortney lying under the roller dead. The family was notified and a physician sent for. From the appearance of the body it must have been lying where it was found some little time. No one can tell how the accident occurred, but it is supposed that he fell forward from the roller, and before he could recover himself the heavy machine passed over a portion of his body, killing him. When found the body was lying face upwards he roller resting on his breast. The young man was well thought of in the neighborhood in which he lived.

Mrs. Nettie McElwain, wife of T. C. McElwain the grocer in the REVIEW building, received a telegram yesterday morning from Vinten, Iowa, announcing the death of her brother, Dr. S. P. Black. No particulars were given. Dr. Black was abut 45 years old and leaves a small child. His wife died about a year ago.

W. E. Wolf, son of Daniel Wolf, Spring Run, and his cousin, J. F. Wolf, son of George Wolf, East Market street, Chambersburg, left this week to take their second year's course in the Medico-Chirurgical College, Philadelphia. Both are bright young men and will doubtless succeed in their chosen profession. The REVIEW will keep them posted on home happenings.

Mr. John Renton and wife of Pittsburg are visiting the family of B. F. Johns. The two families were formerly neighbors in the "Smoky City" and the visit is greatly enjoyed by both families. Mr. Renton is a survivor of the war and was wounded five times in his four years' service. He was a member of the old 13th, afterwards the 102nd Penna regiment. He and Comrade Johns were welcome visitors at the REVIEW office Tuesday.

Paul L. Levis, a member of the staff of Department Commander, H. H. Cummings, paid an official visit to Housum Post, G. A. R., Tuesday evening. Comrade Levis was a lieutenant in the 72d Penna. regiment and was with his regiment when it and the other regiments of the Philadelphia brigade repulsed Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. He wa delighted with Housum Post's home, not only the building and its furnishings, but the lawn with its flowers, trellises, baskets and especially with the gun which the boys have mounted on the lawn.

Fatally Shot.

While Leonard Embly, Rouzerville, a young man 17 years of age, was cleaning his revolver yesterday, the weapon was discharged, the ball entering the abdomen and penetrating the lung. It is thought he cannot recover.

The Law Against Trespassing.

As the hunting season has begun it is well that hunters should know what their privileges are when in pursuit of game. The law also applies to persons gathering nuts, fruits, etc., and its provisions should be carefully read and considered by every one who has occasion or makes occasion to go upon the lands of another. The text of the law as published in the newspapers is as follows:

"That any person or persons who shall wilfully enter or break down, through, or over any field, orchard, garden or yard fence, stone, cut, break, bark, or otherwise mutilate or damage any field crop, nut, fruit or ornamental tree, shrub, bush, plant or vine, trellis, arbor, hotbed, hot or greenhouse, or who shall trample or in any wise injure any grain, grass, vine, vegetables, or other growing crop, or who shall wilfully take or carry away any grain, corn, rye, wheat or other field crop, fruit or vegetable, plants, nuts, or berries, or any fruit or ornamental trees, vines or shrubs, whether the same be attached to the soil or not, shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding fifty dollars for each and every offense."

Diphtheria Seems to Be Spreading—St. Thomas Schools Closed.

For some weeks past diphtheria seems to have been spreading in localities southwest and west of Chambersburg. In portions of St. Thomas township it has been quite malignant. There was one death near Williamson some days ago, the 15-year-old son of Jacob Lowance, whose first name we have not learned. Other members of the family have the disease; it is also in the family of John Stickell.

On Sunday, Jimmie, the four-year-old son of James D. Gillan, in St. Thomas, died of diphtheritic croup, after all that medical skill could do, had been done for him. Jimmie was a remarkably bright and lovable child and was known and loved by every one in the village.

On account of the spread of the disease it was thought advisable to close the St. Thomas schools until the scourge had been conquered. There are still more than a dozen cases in and around the village, some of which are quite malignant.

John Dice and wife just west of town and Mrs. A. L. Martin of the West Point Hotel and a number of others, some of whom live in the western section of town have been suffering from malarial fever.

TUSCARORA VALLEY R. R.

Completed to Blair's Mills and Heading Down Path Valley—A Great Celebration Saturday Last.

The completion of the Tuscarora Valley railroad to Blair's Mills, Huntingdon county, was marked by a grand celebration and picnic at that point Saturday last in which many citizens of Upper Path Valley who are rejoicing over the prospect of at last having a railroad, joined.

The railroad is narrow gauge, taps the main line of the Pennsylvania R. R. at Port Royal, runs through Waterford, Juniata county and is now finished to Blair's Mills, 28 miles in all. The credit for the success of the enterprise thus far is due to T. M. Moorehead, the projector and manager who has labored so persistently in the face of obstacles that would have discouraged most men. The road passes through a section which is rich in minerals and timber. At one point Mr. Moorehead has discovered valuable deposits of marine shells and fossils which he intends to mine and use in the manufacture of phosphates.

It is the intention of Mr. Moorehead and his backers to push the road ahead through the narrows to Concord in this county and then on down to Dry Run, tapping a rich part of the beautiful Path Valley. Two miles of the road from Blair's Mills to Concord are already graded and nearly all of the right of way secured. The Moorehead road was opposed by those who had favored the Sherman's Valley road. Many people about Dry Run and Concord were swindled by the Sherman's Valley projectors and now all the people of Upper Path Valley are anxious for the completion of the Moorehead and will lend it a helping hand.

Saturday there was a great gathering at Blair's Mills. People came from all the four counties which come or nearly join near that point, Franklin, Huntingdon, Perry and Juniata. A special train brought over 1300 persons from along the line of the Tuscarora Valley R. R. As many more went in horse vehicles and a general picnic and good time was had. The gold spike, the last one in the line, was driven by Manager Moorehead and congratulatory speeches were made by Rev. J. K. Lloyd, Port Royal; Dr. Zenas J. Gray, Harrisburg; Judge Williamson, Huntingdon; H. J. Culbertson, Juniata and ex-Congressman Louis E. Atkinson. The Concord and Port Royal bands furnished the music. All had an enjoyable day and the Franklin county participants returned home firm in the belief that Path Valley is at last to have the long much wished for railroad.

International Revenue Collections.

Collector Raymond E. Shearer, on Tuesday issued the following statement of the receipts of the internal revenue office of the Ninth district of Pennsylvania for the month of September, 1895: Cigars and cigaretts, 1894, $137,187.56; 1895. $148,609.79; tobacco, 1894, $703.20; 1895, $686,55; beer, 1894, $8824.96; 1895, $10,810.54; spirits, 1894, $731.50; 1895, $13,003.65; snuff, 1894, $36.96; 1895, $11.28; special taxes, 1894, $472.08; 1895, $1,088.14. Total collection for month of September, 1895, $174,209.95; total collection for month of September, 1894, $147,956.26; increase, $26,253.69.

Something over a year ago the collector became satisfied from a quiet investigation which he made that a number of persons in the district were selling liquor without having complied with the internal revenue laws in taking out a special tax stamp for the sale of the same. He determined that not only those who came in voluntarily and paid the tax, but all who were liable should pay the tax for the sale of liquor. A rigid canvass of the district was productive of astonishing results in this respect. The records of the office show that from September 1, 1892, to August 31, 1893, the amount received from retail dealers in liquor for special taxes was $41,228.52; from September 1, 1893, to August 31, 1894, it was $43,566.15; from September 1, 1894, to August 31, 1895, it was $45,798.92. For September of this year the amount received for special taxes and penalty for non-payment of the same at the proper time, was $1,389.01; for September, 1894, it was $510.14; for September, 1893, $175.03.

Gettysburg Battlefield Notes.

The Gettysburg Compiler says, the plan of the battlefield commission is to place pyramids of shot and shell, such as were used by the different cannon, alongside of them in their various positions on the field at Gettysburg. At present Captain Gilbert's foundry is a busy place, getting out additional iron gun carriages and making up pyramids of Parrott shells. Heretofore all have been spherical, but now the other styles are being received from the ordnance department at Washington. The disuse of the style of artillery and ammunition in vogue in the late war has left a large supply on hand, and they are being used in the decoration of this as well as the other national parks.

The survivors of the sixth Penna. Cavalry, (Rush's Lancers) and their friends, numbering in all about 300, and including many ladies, had their eighth annual reunion at Gettysburg Saturday. There were speeches by several gentlemen, and lots of music including a number of solos by ladies of the party. In the evening there was a campfire in the court house; the hall was not large enough to furnish standing room for all who desired admittance. The entire party remained over Sunday.

The site for the bronze tablet containing the speech of President Lincoln at the dedication of the National cemetery in November 1863, has not yet been selected, but it will not be in the cemetery as that is not a part of the National Park. Arrangements for the manufacture of the tablet are being made. Secretary Lamont, Col. Wilson of the engineer corps and the Park Commission expect to have a conference soon, when the site will be decided upon.

Four observatories or towers are being built on different parts of the battlefield. They are well under way and will soon be completed. The one on Round Top is in place and nearly finished.

Pleasant Occasions at Metal.

A delightful picnic was held by the M. E. Sunday school of Metal, and its friends, on the island grove just above Metal, on Saturday. There was a good dinner for everybody, good vocal music and other interesting exercises and amusements. The company present was large and all enjoyed themselves. In the evening the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society enjoyed a sociable at the home of Miss Emily Wilson, nearly all the young people in the vicinity being present, besides a number from Fannettsburg and other places in the valley. All had a good time.

OVER THE HILLS.

Across Path Valley to Burnt Cabins, Fort Littleton, McConnellsburg and Home.

On Friday last at noon, Hon. T. M. Mahon and the REVIEW man left Chambersburg for a brief jaunt among the mountains on the borders of Franklin, Huntingdon and Fulton counties. The roads traversed through Hamilton and Letterkenny were very dry and dusty, but the Lawyers' road up the Strasburg mountain was in excellent condition—better than either of the travellers had ever seen it. The horses jogged along nicely making good time until the top of Fannettsburg mountain was reached. The mountain road to that point was fairly good but from there to the bridge across the Conococheague creek at Fannettsburg it was miserable—much worse than either of them had seen it, and one of them knew it well and has known it for almost forty-five years. The road master or supervisor should have his attention called to this road if it has not been done already.

The pleasant spot on this portion of the road is "Betty Bell's Spring" where horses and drivers refreshed themselves with copious draughts of as pure water as Mother Earth can count among her treasures anywhere.

The writer well remembers when he picked stone from and shoveled dirt on this road forty years ago when "Horse Valley John Skinner" was supervisor and hired a number of Fannettsburg men and boys to work on the mountain, and, though a kind-hearted employer he saw that the boys earned their money, which was right. He paid them good wages and he said that they earned their money.

On one occasion when they had eaten their dinner at the spring above named, Adam Miller cut a small forked witch hazel branch and "smelled" for what he could find, whether water, coal, money or other treasure. After following the course of the stream some distance into the mountain he said, "Now, we will hunt for money." Holding his witch hazel fork before him he walked slowly up over the bank and over the reputed site of Betty Bell's cabin, when the stick began to turn. He stopped and moved the stick slowly back and forth. Then he said: "It must be here if it is anywhere, and it is about four feet down." Soon picks were digging up the sandy ground and shovels were throwing it out, when about four feet or less from the surface some one threw out an old copper cent. This was all the treasure that was found. It might be said in this connection that about the time the digging was begun a heavy black cloud rose above the western mountain and soon heavy peals of thunder were heard. Bright zigzag flashes of lightning cut their way through the heavens and the peals of thunder grew more loud and crashing until the air and earth seemed to shake under the shock of heaven's artillery. The commotion in the clouds reached its height about the time the penny was found; then some one in whose voice and face the awe of superstition was plainly observable said: "There is no use in digging any further. The storm was sent to stop it and something dreadful will happen if you keep on digging." Something of the same feeling must have pervaded the whole company for the work ceased and all hands sought shelter from the approaching rain. The thunder then abated and the lightning grew less vivid until by and by, the clouds scattered and were dissipated, and the sun came out and all went to their work. But the "smelling," the digging, the finding of the penny and the gathering storm, all left their impression on the minds of the younger portion of the workers and upon some of those older, as well.

Arriving at the hotel in Fannettsburg, Landlord Haiston was on hand with a kindly greeting; everything about the hotel was fresh and clean and inviting and gave promise of enjoyable entertainment for the night which promise were fully met. A number of social calls were made and friendly talks with old friends on old times were enjoyed. A delightful feature of the early evening was the listening to music delightfully rendered by Miss Mame Kegerreis on the piano. Miss Kegerreis is a performer of rare taste and ability. Later in the evening the cornet band gave the transient guests of the hotel a serenade. The skill of the musicians showed that the old-time love for martial music still lives among the people of this village on the hill and one of the drummers, James M. Miller, is a wounded veteran who was a drummer when he was scarcely able to carry a small tenor drum, almost, if not quite, forty years ago. The travellers were then called upon for speeches, and after an introduction to a goodly sized audience by Captain J. H. Walker, they in turn responded, Mr. Mahon especially delighting all who heard him. An hour was then spent in telling and hearing hunting and fishing stories. In the telling of fish stories especially, the Congressman and the host certainly excel in that kind of entertainment, and in the relating of things marvelous they equal Pickwick in "Master Humphrey's Clock."

The road across the third mountain into Fulton county was better than that on the middle mountain, so good time was made next morning in reaching the quiet little village of Burnt Cabins which derives its name from the fact, so it is said, that in the days of the Whisky Insurrection in 1794, the people who occupied the cabins on the site of the present village were engaged mostly in converting their corn into fiery liquor, by illicit means. When the troops came along on their way to the western part of the state to quell the insurrection there, they burned the cabins hoping thus to disperse the lawbreakers and break up the illicit distilling business. So the village which was soon rebuilt better than before was called Burnt Cabins.

In the early forenoon Fort Littleton was reached and quite a number of people from the surrounding country were already there. A warm welcome was received from the Odd Fellows and many others present. Soon a procession was formed of the Odd Fellows headed by the Fannettsburg band, which marched to the beautiful grove near the village. The formal exercises were begun with singing, then prayer by Rev. Owen Hicks. Rev. W. M. Cline, Rogersville, Tennessee, made the address of welcome, which was responded to by M. R. Shaffner, Esq., of McConnellsburg. The REVIEW man spoke briefly in a rambling fashion after which a bounteous picnic dinner was enjoyed by all present.

In the afternoon Hon. T. M. Mahon spoke on Odd Fellowship, expounding its principles and telling of its growth and the grand work of the order both in extent and character. He was followed by Rev. Hicks who spoke in the same line. After an hour spent in mingling with the people, greeting old friends and making new ones, the travellers left for home which they reached at 11 p. m., coming via McConnellsburg.

The trip was enjoyable throughout except the portion of bad road referred to above, and the REVIEW has fifty names on its list that it did not have before, for which the publisher is very grateful to those who thus show their appreciation of the new paper.

It is very pleasant to thus meet pleasant people in a friendly way.

Kindly Words From Metal.

The REVIEW is getting better with each issue, and while there are other good county papers there is none better.

Though we were born some years later than the editor—in 1859— still we can remember him as a Path Valley boy; and our older brothers and sisters were his schoolmates thirty years ago. In this connection we might say that we have in our possession a cane which the father of the editor presented to our father more than twenty years ago, together with several valuable books. So, Mr. Editor, as our fathers were always fast friends so may we be. Our best wishes for the REVIEW, its editor and family.

Rev. E. B. Somers of the U. B. church preached a very interesting and instructive discourse on the morning of September 15. Text, Exodus 6, 6; and on the 22d of September Rev. J. Smith Gordon gave a very full account of the late State C. E. Convention held at Erie, Pa. The members of the society at Metal who failed to hear it missed a good thing.

The Metal Cornet band, organized last year, is quite a success. The boys can play quite well already.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Lesson For Sunday, October 5.

International Bible lesson for Sunday, October 6, 1895, from Judges 2 : 1-12, 16. Title: The time of the Judges. Golden text: "The Lord raised up Judges, which delivered them."

The story of the lesson and its surroundings is thus told by Cunningham Geikie, D. D., LL. D., in the Sunday School Times:

The strong bias of Arab races to live as distinct tribes rather than unite as a nation, was shown as soon as the dictatorship of Moses, followed by that of Joshua, had ended by the death of the latter. There was, in fact, an anticipation of what has often been seen among the Bed'ween in recent times, when some temporary enthusiasm for a short time unites the encampments of generally rival tribes, to be followed very soon by its ebbing, and the return of the various factions to the independent headship of their respective shaykhs. For centuries after Joshua the Hebrews were like so many Arab clans, permanently encamped in distinct districts of the hill country of Palestine or across the Jordan; those on the west of the river, however, leaving nomadic life for that of peasant agriculture, while their brethren beyond it reverted largely to the tent life of their forefathers, becoming "shepherds," as Jacob's sons had been, and as, probably, many of themselves had been on the pastoral tracts of Goshen.

It is clear, moreover, that the conquests of Joshua were soon to a great extent lost; for we find that, among others, the tribes of Judah and Simeon were still without territory after his death. Ephraim had seized the rich central hills of what was afterwards Samaria. Manasseh and other tribes had appropriated the fertile plain of Esdraelon and the green hills of Galilee, as far as their opponents, the native races, permitted, and hence there only remained, for Judah and Simeon, the barren hills from Jerusalem south, and the dry uplands of the "South Country," down to the desert below Beersheba. The camp at Gilgal was still, apparently, the headquarters of the nation; and from this these two tribes went up, and won for themselves the proposed district, taking Jerusalem and burning it, but very soon losing it again. They also, for the moment, took Gaza and Askelon and Ekron, on the maritime plain, but only to lose these also, the natives having iron chariots against which the Hebrews could not stand; but they won and permanently retained Hebron, with its beautiful valley, and the uplands to the south, away to the wilderness. Benjamin had to content itself with a small strip immediately north of Jerusalem, leaving the Jebusites in possession of the city, and simply living in it and among them. Ephraim extended its border south to Bethel, and it and Manasseh stretched their northern limits apparently as far as Banias. But they were forced to leave the Canaanites in possession of the rich sunken oasis of Bethshean and of many places along the hills bordering Esdraelon, while the Amorites could not be expelled from the central hills, but became tributaries. In the same way, Zebulun, Asher and Naphtali were forced to content themselves with a part of the territory assigned them by Joshua, and had to live in friendly relations with the Canaanites, who kept the strongholds. As to Dan, it was driven up to the hills and thrust back into a crowed triangle, west of Benjamin and Judah.

Such a state of things was eminently dangerous to the loyalty of the Hebrews to their own God, Jehovah; and hence we read that some unknown messenger from him came up, from the camp at Gilgal, to a place afterwards known as "The Weeping," and, according to the Septuagint, "to Bethel, and to the house of Israel," even before the death of Joshua, and denounced their unfaithfulness to the covenant they had sworn to obey Jehovah. They had already made leagues with the natives, and had not overthrown their altars; and this ebb of enthusiasm, they were told, would result in the old races being left in the land as adversaries, and constant temptations to idolatry. Yet, in the main, Israel, we are informed, kept to Jehovah not only during what remained of the life of Joshua, but also during the lifetime of the elders who outlived him, and, like him, had seen "all the great works of the Lord," meaning, at least, those of the wilderness life and the times of the conquest. But when the grand old hero had been laid in his tomb, in his own inheritance, Timnath-heres, perhaps Kefr Haris, nine miles south of Nablus, and when the last of his contemporaries had followed him to the grave, the influences round the tribes proved too strong for their puritanism, and they quietly adopted the religion of the peoples of the land, and "served the Baals and the Ashtoreths," which they saw in every hamlet or grove, and on many hill-tops.

It must, indeed, have been very hard for a people in their stage of civilization to stand alone, with no symbols of their God, in an age which knew of no religion without many idols. In the childhood of man, which these ages, and others long after them, may be said to have been, as regards conceptions of the divinity, motion seemed the proof of life, and hence the flowing stream, the waving tree, the moving sun, moon, or star, was held to veil some personality, and of this they made a symbol, and worshiped it as a god or demon. In Palestine, with its warm climate, nature worship, thus almost inevitable, took the special form of worship of the reproductive powers of earth and the heavens. The sun appeared the great father of all round them; for was it not at his appearing in spring that the great mother, Earth, bore all its myriad wonders of leaf and grain and fruit? But this worship very easily sank into a glorification of sensuality, so that the Canaanite gods were the centres of unimaginable impurity. Such a relaxed morality soon told on the warlike vigor of the Hebrews; and hence we need not wonder that they in their turn were feeble before hostile attacks, and had the misery of seeing their homes spoiled, and their women and children carried off, to be sold as slaves. From time to time, however, distress brought passing fits of vigor; and leaders, chosen at such times, under the name of judges, were able, while this spasm of religious earnestness lasted, to drive off the swarming enemies.

The report of the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, shows that 13,000 new appointments of fourth-class postmasters were made. Only 769 of them were occasioned by death. Nearly 60,000 complaints regarding ordinary mail matter were received and disposed of.

WOMAN'S HOUR.

SOMETHING TO INTEREST OUR MOTHERS, WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS.

Household Hints—A Bit of Fashion—Humor and Other Items of Note For The Fair Sex.

When a new pair of shoes is brought home never place them higher than your head if you would have good luck while wearing them, and never blacken them before you have had on both shoes or else you may meet with an accident and, perhaps, sudden death.

It is said that the old maids believe that when their shoes become untied and keep coming untied it is true that their sweethearts are talking and thinking about them.

The sweetheart, when on his way to see his lady love, should he stub his right toe will surely be welcome, but if he stubs his left toe he may know he is not wanted.—Shoe and Leather Facts.

Inasmuch as it costs $240 to convert a Chinaman, and only $117 to convert a Japanese to Christianity, it would seem that it were better in every way to concentrate the effort upon Japan, as twice as many Japs can be saved for the same money. Besides, the Jap is more of a man.—Indianapolis Journal.

The St Louis girl wrote: "Dont phale to be thar." Her Kansas City beau replied: "I will be thar; there's no such word as phale."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Many a man has married the flower of the family only to be glad to get baker's bread after all.

Miss Beatrice Harraden, having read in a number of newspapers that she had already accumulated a large fortune by her writings, has made a statement as to the amount of her earnings. All that she ever received for "Ships That Pass in the Night" from England was $500 and from America and the British colonies combined she has had the paltry sum of $150 making $650 in all.

There is still time to save the seeds of favorite annuals which have not been allowed to ripen seed during the summer because of disturbing the wealth of bloom. Save more than you want for your own use and add a little brightness and beauty to the world by giving away the extra seeds next Spring to some one who cannot afford to buy them.

A broadway shoe dealer, says the New York Sun, has hit upon what seems a new advertising scheme. Every day he places a fine pair of shoes, narrow fives or sixes, in his show window, and offers to sell them at a price ranging from 1 to 25 cents to any man whom they will fit perfectly. It is a proof that many New Yorkers have small feet that the shoes rarely remain unsold for more than a day. Though seemingly new this is but a variation of an old and successful scheme of a well-known Brooklyn firm of hatters of exhibiting a very large-sized hat, and offering to give it free to any man whose head it will fit.

Brown spots on baking dishes may be removed by dipping a damp flannel in whiting and rubbing the spots well with it.

Brooms may be improved by dipping weekly in boiling water.

Silver should be dipped occasionally in strong borax water, boiling hot.

Lamp chimneys may be cleaned with a little carbon oil on a piece of newspaper.

For removing mildew, spread soft soap over the stained spot and expose to the sun.

Boiling water will remove tea stains.

Mix a teaspoonful of powdered alum with the stove polish.

Dark blue drilling makes excellent kitchen aprons.

Potatoes should be taken from the water and drained as soon as they can be readily pierced with a fork, covered with a towel and kept hot 15 minutes.

Grass stains may be removed by rubbing with molasses before washing.

In washing iron kettles and other cooking utensils, both inside and out, nothing will be found equal to a kitchen brush kept solely for the purpose.

Another brush may be kept for washing celery, lettuce, spinach, potatoes, turnips, etc., where thorough cleansing with the hands is a difficult operation

Lemons may be kept in cold water, changed each week.

Orange or lemon peel will remove taste of fish from steel knives and forks.

Hot wood ashes on a cold stove will remove grease stains,

Meat and fowl may be rendered tender if when boiling a teaspoonful of vinegar be put in the kettle.

Isinglass in stove doors may be cleaned by rubbing with vinegar.

Remove grease stains from silk by rubbing with magnesia on the wrong side.

Don't shake table cloths, dusty cloths or bedding out of the front window. Remember that pedestrians pass occasionally, and they will object seriously to your novel method of cleaning.

Grease stains may be removed from an uncarpeted floor as follows: Pour cold water on at once, scrape off the surface grease and wash with a solution of strong potash water, applied with a long-handled mop, as it is not safe to bring the hands in contact with the potash.

Brandied Peaches—The clingstone is the variety of fruit that is chosen for this, and the peaches should be fully matured. It is, however better that they be a little under ripe than over ripe, for they should never be soft. The best white sugar should be used and a good quality of brandy. The Southern cook uses what is called "neutral spirits," which is quite as good as brandy and less expensive. The skins of peaches should never be taken off with a knife, but with boiling water into which soda has been placed, using two large tablespoonfuls of soda to every four quarts of water. Now rub each peach with a cloth to remove the skin, and as fast as they are skinned lay them in a dish of cold water. Weigh a pound of sugar for every pound of fruit, place in a preserving kettle with very little water and set in a moderate heat. When the sugar is dissolved, boil the syrup, skim off the scum, and lay into it as many peaches as can be placed together without crowding. Large peaches require from 10 to 12 minutes for cooking, and smaller ones about 6 minutes. Remove the peaches and boil the syrup down until quite thick, and set aside to cool. When the peaches are cold place them in jars. Measure the syrup, and for every quart allow one pint of brandy; mix well and cover the peaches, but not filling the jars. Set aside for four days, and by this time some of the fruit will have risen to the top, being caused by the juice oozed from the peaches. Fill the jars with brandy and seal.

Ourselves and Neighbors.

Monday afternoon of last week the house of George Myers, Clear Ridge, Fulton county, was destroyed by fire with all its contents except a sewing machine and some minor articles. The stove-pipe through the roof was the cause of the fire. The older members of the family were absent, and a fire was kindled in the stove by one of the children to cook an egg for another child that was sick. The burning of the building was the result.

The New York Democratic Convention of last week, allowed the County Democracy a representation of only one-fifth, to Tammany's four-fifths, and the Grace Fairchild men left the Convention hall. The platform declares for Home Rule, local option and excise reform. Ex-Governor Flower was made Permanent Chairman, and a State ticket was named.

Charles H. Wetzel, station agent on the Beech Creek railroad at Clarence, Snow Shoe township, Centre county, shot a large panther near the station recently. It measured a little over 11 feet, the largest known to have been killed on the Allegheny mountains. So the story first appeared in the newspapers but it turned out afterward that the "panther" was only a house cat and that the story was started at the expense of the county commissioners who had replied to an inquiry as to what they would pay for the scalp of a panther.

A peculiar penalty was inflicted upon three men at Norristown. Jno. Jenkins, Mahlon Markley and James Dolan were acquitted on charge of assault and battery on the promise that they would accompany the prosecutor, J. B. Fisher, to church for the next twelve Sundays.

Mrs. Sarah A., widow of the late Gen. Lemuel Todd, Carlisle, made an offer to erect a tower, on the First Presbyterian church, that place, to cost $15,000, as a memorial to her husband. In abandoning the project Mrs. Todd publishes a card in the papers accusing the church of failing to comply with the requirements of her proposition.

Mrs. David Gilbert, of near Wingerton, was bitten on one of her legs above the ankle by an odd-looking caterpillar. She soon experienced considerable pain in the region of the bite, and two days later symptoms of erysipelas began to show themselves, and she has since been confined to her bed. It is supposed that her indisposition has been caused by the poisonous bite of the insect.

An order issued from National Guard headquarters Thursday makes some changes in the undress coat of all officers which will go into effect June 1, next. After that the braid on breast and back of the coat will be removed. New insignia is designated as follows: For the quartermaster general, division and brigade quarters, old English letters in gold. "Q. D.;" for commissary general, division and brigade commissaries, old English letters in gold, "S. D.;" for general inspector of rifle practice and division inspector, a three-quarter inch square silver metal target with bull's eye and two rings enameled in black; for chief of artillery, two gold cannons crossed; for leader of brigade band, a silver metal lyre.

The new edition of the school laws and decisions in course of preparation by the department of Public Instruction will not be ready for distribution before January, 1896. The edition of 1894 is entirely exhausted.

During a heavy thunder-storm that prevailed in the vicinity of Towanda Thursday afternoon, the lightning struck in the Bradford county agricultural society's fair ground, whose fair is now in session, killing four horses. Many people sustained a slight shock, but no one was seriously injured.

The services held in the Church of God, Orrstown, over Sunday, September 22d to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the dedication of the church, were of a highly interesting character. On Thursday and Friday evenings were preaching services. Saturday evening a grogram was rendered, consisting of music, essay and a number of addresses, including those of Rev. S. S. Wylie, of Middle Spring, and Rev. L. T. Snyder of Orrstown, both of whom, in a brief, but interesting manner, congratulated the church on reaching her fiftieth milestone. On Sunday morning Rev. Abram Long, one among the first pastors of the church, preached an eloquent sermon from the 22d chapter of Rev., 17th verse. After which the history of the church was read by Mr. Samuel Knisley. Old fashioned hyms were sung without the organ, and Sunday school conducted likewise, each teacher selecting a lesson for his class, etc. In the evening the ordinances of the church was observed. An interesting feature of the decoration was the arrangement on the wall of photographs of all the original members and pastors, which could be obtained.

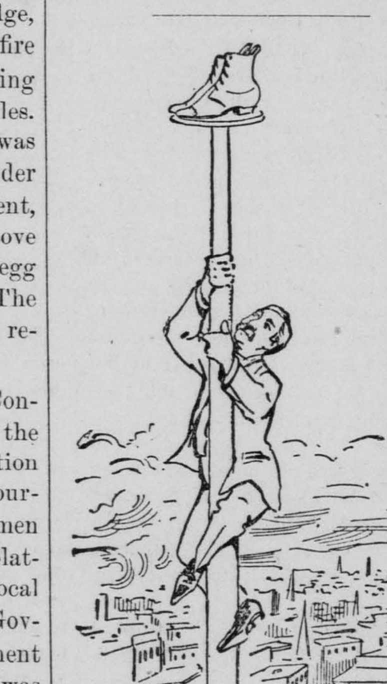

Neighbor—"Bertie, your mother is calling you."

Bertie—"Yes'm, I know it; but I fancy she doesn't want me very bad."

Neighbor—"She has called you seven times already."

Bertie—"Yes, I know; but she hasn't called 'Albert' yet."—Tit-Bits.
